Impact on economy seen as severe

Steel cutbacks idling thousands

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's steel industry, faced with sluggish demand, increased foreign competition and declining profits, is laying off thousands of workers and cutting production.

Whatever happens in the industry is likely to be felt by all consumers because steel is used in everything from paper clips to railroad tracks.

The largest single impact is on the auto industry. Some Detroit analysts are predicting the sticker price of 1978 models will go up by as much as $300, at least in part because of increasing steel costs.

"We may well be past the point of salvation for some steel producers," C. William Verity, chairman of Armco Steel Corp., told a House trade subcommittee this week.

First half steel profits, at $289.5 million, were 60 per cent below those reported a year earlier despite a 7 per cent sales gain. At that rate, the industry will end 1977 with its worst results since 1971.

The crisis has already led to one bankruptcy and a flurry of layoffs, including those in steel towns like Youngstown, Ohio, where Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. plans to dismiss 5,000 persons within three months.

Neither steel industry sources nor the United Steelworkers could say Thursday just how many workers are out of work, but estimates range up to 100,000.

The pace of cutbacks has picked up since mid-year.

About 3,000 steelworkers were laid off when the Alan Wood Steel Co. in suburban Philadelphia went bankrupt after losing $34.4 million over the last three years.

Bethlehem Steel, the nation's second-largest producer, said it would lay off 7,300 workers in flood-ravaged Johnstown, Pa., and Lackawanna, N.Y., after losing $75.4 million through June 30.

U.S. Steel, the nation's largest producer, has announced some layoffs, including 200 in the Youngstown area. It has also asked 10,000 management employees to forego a cost-of-living increase.

Other producers have either announced reductions or are considering them. More cuts are likely.

Some analysts argue the current crisis may be healthy, however, because it may eliminate marginal firms and leave a stronger, more profitable steel industry.

The industry is struggling with a number of problems, some historic, some political. Imports are its principle target, however.

The American Iron and Steel Institute, a trade association representing 95 per cent of the nation's producers, estimates that imports will account for 19 per cent of the domestic market in 1977.

These imports have absorbed 74 per cent of the market's growth, forcing American producers to look for profits in the narrow gap between rising costs and low prices.

Trip to include visit to South Africa

Carter sets eight-nation tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced today he will embark in late November on an 11-day, four-continent trip that will include the first visit of an American president to black Africa.

Carter's journey to South America, Africa, Asia and Europe will, in geographical terms, be the most ambitious ever undertaken by a U.S. President. He will be conferring with close allies, newfound friends and sometime adversaries.

The eight-nation tour, which will begin on Nov. 22, the 14th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, was announced on Carter's behalf by his national security affairs adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Absent from Carter's itinerary are any contacts with Soviet or Middle Eastern officials directly involved in the two major foreign policy questions that currently confront the President — arms curbs and the search for a Middle East settlement.

The journey, described by Brzezinski as underlining Carter's commitment to "constructive change" in the world, will take the President to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria, India, Iran, France, Poland and Belgium.

He will return to the White House Dec. 2.

Responding to questions, Brzezinski said no consideration had been given during the months of long planning of the trip for a possible meeting with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. However, Brzezinski did not totally exclude the possibility.

Asked why Carter was not including the troubled Middle East in the schedule, Brzezinski said, "There are just so many things you can include in an itinerary."

Brzezinski said that much-publicized differences between the United States and Brazil and to a lesser extent Iran over human rights issues were no bar to visiting those countries.

He said human rights issues were "not a precondition" for serious dealings with other nations.

Mrs. Carter will accompany her husband on the trip. When Carter made his only other overseas trip, to London and Geneva last May, she remained in Washington.

The President had indicated almost a year ago he expected to do little traveling overseas, at least during his first year in office.

"His preference is to stay at home," Brzezinski said, and argued that Carter indeed has done little traveling outside the country.

Nov. 22 — flies to Caracas, Venezuela for an overnight stay.

Nov. 23 — on to the Brazilian capital of Brasilia, where Carter will spend the night.

Nov. 24 — flies across the South Atlantic to Lagos, Nigeria, remaining there a full day.

Nov. 26 — leaves Lagos for the Indian capital of New Delhi, arriving Nov. 27.

Nov. 29 — stops in Tehran, Iran, for a brunch with the Shah of Iran, and continues on to Paris the same day.

Dec. 1 — flies from Paris to Warsaw, spending a night in the Polish capital.

Dec. 2 — flies to Brussels for meetings with Belgian officials, European Common Market leaders and officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization before returning to Washington the same day.

Woman grabs $25,000

Lottery winner says she has no methods

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mrs. Jewell Henne said there was no special method to her winning the Ohio Lottery drawing Thursday. "I just picked a letter and said it."

That was all it took for the 54-year-old mother of three to go home with $25,000. She bought her winning ticket at her hometown grocery store in Lewisburg.

Mrs. Henne, a housewife, said she plans to use her winnings to do a little traveling. She said she would like to see Florida because she's never been there and she would also like to buy a car.

Although she said she felt "just wonderful" after the big win, she admitted she was still a little nervous, adding with a laugh, "I've been nervous for a week."

Other 50-cent winners were: Mary Bogle, Shaker Heights $6,500; Helen Amata, Lakewood, $7,300; Clara Labuda, Seven Hills, $7,300. Last week's big winner, Robert Ratzow, did not add to his $25,000.

Winners of the TV Bonus instant game were: Joseph F. Conroy Jr., Ridgeville, $50,000; Ann Gardner, Cleveland, $10,000; and Jim Lounsbury, Cleveland, $5,000.

The numbers drawn in Thursday's 50-cent game were: single-digit gold, 9; two-digit, white, 75; three-digit blue, 040; and six-digit, 157566.

Numbers: 50 cent: nine, seven-five, zero-four-zero, one-five-seven-five-six-six.

Deputies confiscate over 100 bags of marijuana

Quartet charged in drug sale bust

Four Cincinnati area women were arrested and charged with trafficking marijuana and carrying concealed weapons by Fayette County sheriff's deputies early Friday morning.

Fayette County Sheriff's Sgt. William Crooks said a truck driver stopped two deputies who were on patrol near U.S. 35 and I-71 around 4:15 a.m. Friday and told them a number of women were attempting to sell drugs from a van-type truck on I-71.

Sheriff's deputies Donald Cox and William McKenzie spotted a vehicle matching the truck driver's description a short time later parked at a truck stop in the same area. Crooks said as the deputies approached the vehicle they observed one occupant trying to hide a quantity of drugs which were visible.

Upon searching the truck, the deputies allegedly found a suitcase containing over 100 bags of marijuana and quantities of several types of pills and capsules. Crooks also said a .25 caliber automatic pistol with a loaded clip was discovered in the purse of one of the occupants during the search.

The women were taken into custody and all four were charged with trafficking marijuana and carrying concealed weapons. Arrested were Loretta Mendez, 25, of Cincinnati; Joan F. Sloan, 22, of Cincinnati; Donna F. Mullins, 33, of Cleves; and Teresa Wilber, 20, of Harrison.

The four women are currently incarcerated in the Fayette County jail. The sheriff's sergeant said after consulting with the county prosecuting attorney he anticipated presenting the case to the grand jury, which is meeting today in Fayette County Common Pleas Court.

To postpone decision

Delay tactics booked on gas price controls

WASHINGTON — President Carter's allies in the Senate, whipped in a test vote on natural gas price controls, are falling back on delay tactics and the threat of a filibuster to postpone a final decision.

With continued debate scheduled today, two Democratic foes of deregulation, Sens. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and James Abourezk of South Dakota, said they were ready to offer more than 100 amendments in an attempt to block a final vote.

Metzenbaum said he was prepared for a "full discussion on the issue," a Senate euphemism for filibuster.

There was no sign that White House advisers were supporting a filibuster, and the President, who lobbied personally Thursday in a losing cause, was described as still hopeful deregulation would be rejected.

The President's energy plan, already approved by the House, calls for a 30-cent increase in the price of natural gas, now set at $1.45 per thousand cubic feet. Controls also would be extended to currently unregulated gas sold within producing states, mainly Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

An alternate industry-backed plan calls for an immediate end of controls on newly produced onshore gas. Price controls would be removed from offshore gas over five years.

Under either plan, consumers will be paying larger heating bills in the future, although estimates vary of the effect of the two plans.

A Congressional Budget Office study says Carter's plan would mean an average consumer would be paying $42.80 a month for heating by 1978, but $55.80 under the industry plan.

Deregulation backers dispute the estimate and say consumers won't be hit that hard.

The defeat for the administration came on a motion to scrap the industry plan, backed by Sen. James Pearson, R-Kans., and Lloyd Benson, D-Tex.. The vote to keep the plan alive was 52-46, a result that the President's floor managers said means almost certain death for the administration's natural gas plan when it comes up for a final vote.

The setback is not the first for the administration's energy plan.

Senate committees have discarded proposals to tax cars that use gasoline inefficiently and to overhaul electric utility rate structures.

Worker shoots 3 at Columbus plant

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 53-year-old worker waiting for the morning shift change today at Ross Laboratories shot three employees — one of them fatally — before killing himself as police closed in, authorities said.

Police said Charles C. Lewis, 53, of Columbus, pulled a .357 magnum from a brown lunch bag in a cafeteria filled with coffee drinkers waiting for shift change early this morning and wounded Eugene Erwin, 31, as Erwin sat with three friends.

Police said about 50 workers were in the area and took cover under tables or fled after Lewis ran from the room to a maintenance area where he wounded Arthur Hammonds, 62.

Erwin and Hammonds, both of Columbus, were reported in critical condition.

The assailant then went to the department, where he was to report for work, and shot Ethelbert Dye, 49, as Dye was leaving his shift. Dye died minutes later, authorities said.

Police Sgt. Willard Orndorf, who cornered Lewis in a loading area of the pharmaceuticals firm, said "I told him to drop the gun. About that time, he stuck the gun in his head and blew his head off. He never said a word.

"He was glassy-eyed. A strange look on his face, like he was in outer space somewhere," Orndorf said.

Numerous items featured

Extensive sale set Saturday by police

Everything from nuts and bolts to expensive leather coats.

That's what will be featured in an extensive sale to be conducted by the Washington C.H. Police Department Saturday morning.

The sale, the first held by the police department since late 1973, is an attempt by the city to dispose of unclaimed property collected or confiscated by police officers during investigations of various cases.

Some of the items to be sold include approximately 40 bicycles, a complete selection of eight-track tapes and record albums, a tape player, blue jeans, a dog collar, cartons of assorted brands of cigarettes, fishing equipment, a 1966 model car, plus numerous other items.

Police departments are required by law to hold unclaimed property at least 90 days before they can be sold. Proper advertisements have been published in the Record-Herald in past weeks.

The auction will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the city service department garage on W. Elm Street.

It took police officers seven hours to dispose of items in the last sale, which raised more than $1,000 for the city's general operating fund.

Crosby launches nostalgic tour

PRESTON, England (AP) — Bing Crosby is crooning his way through England, opening his latest concert tour in an area where his last audience was made up of American servicemen during World War II.

Thursday night, Britons got their turn, and more than 2,000 mostly middle-aged people crammed into Preston's Guild Hall as the 73-year-old Crosby went gingerly through his act.

Although he still suffers from back trouble that began earlier this year when he fell from a stage, the voice that has seen Crosby through 50 years of stardom was still strong. He opened with, "I've Got A Dog Named Rover," a song he first performed at the age of 13.

Crosby, whose show moves to Manchester tonight and then to London, last performed in northwestern England during the war, when he sang for servicemen at Burtonwood Air Base in Warrington.

Ohio senators losers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ohio Sens. John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, both Democrats, voted with the losing side Thursday when the Senate turned down a move to scrap an industry supported plan to deregulate new natural gas prices.

Administration stance on Concorde readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, taking sides on an issue that is controversial on both sides of the Atlantic, is making a decision about U.S. landing rights for the Concorde.

Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams scheduled a news conference today to announce the administration's position, which could determine the financial fate of the world's first supersonic commercial airliner.

Adams also was using the news conference to issue the government's first proposed rule governing the noise level for supersonic aircraft.

The administration has been considering several options for weeks as it decided what to do about the Concorde. Possibilities ranged from an outright ban on the plane to permitting it landing rights in as many as 13 U.S. cities.

Presently the plane is flying only into Washington's Dulles airport for a trial period that ends Saturday.

The issue has created domestic and foreign political problems for President Carter, since a New York City ban on Concorde trial operations strained relations between the United States and two old friends, Britain and France.

Failure to comply with set ordinances, the penalties will be assessed. These ordinances may be reviewed at the Board of Public Affairs office at the town hall.

Rosettes prep for Xenia parade

The Rosettes Drill Team of Washington C.H. will enter a float in Xenia's 14th annual Old Fashioned Days Festival parade on Saturday.

The float competition offers cash prizes for the best entry in the parade, which is co-sponsored by the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club and the Xenia Area Chamber of Commerce. The opportunity to win the money for the drill team was one of the main factors in its entering the parade, according to Donna Orihood, an advisor to the group.

Members of the drill team, comprised of girls between the ages of 3-15, will sit amidst a "rose garden" constructed by six of the team's advisors.

Preparation of the float began about three weeks ago, Mrs. Orihood said. She said the six, which included herself, her husband Marvin, Gene Orihood, Marie Knapp and Sharon and Ronnie Campbell, spent an average of about four hours a day constructing the float and its decorations.

Mrs. Orihood noted the project would have cost around $200 if the group had to foot the bill itself, but several major portions were donated by area businesses and residents. The farm wagon, which will carry the float (towed by a truck), was donated by Wendell Kirk of New Holland. Kirk's Furniture of New Holland donated the green indoor-outdoor carpet, which will give the impression of grass atop the float.

The girls will be seated on a white wooden bench surrounded by a matching picket fence, both constructed by Marvin Orihood. Wrought iron furniture in the "garden" will also hold some of the girls. A background trellis, donated by Mrs. Grover Shipley of New Holland, will be filled with crape paper roses as will the baskets to be placed throughout the float.

Each drill team member riding the float will carry a real rose, compliments of a Jeffersonville flower shop, Mrs. Orihood said, as they trek along the 2 1/4-mile parade route through Xenia's downtown area.

Rosettes Drill Team prepare crape paper roses for the "rose garden" float the team is entering in a parade for Xenia's 14th annual Old Fashioned Days Festival on Saturday. The Rosettes float, built over the past three weeks at a cost of about $200, will be reusable for other parades later this year.

Although the farm wagon must be returned for harvesting, Mrs. Orihood said the float was constructed so that it could be dismantled and stored in plastic for other parades later in the year and the first of next year.

Finishing touches on the Rosettes float were expected to be completed Thursday night with the parade scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. on Saturday in front of Xenia's new junior high school.

Then he said he believed Carter based his remarks on the investigative reports he had read and "these people here in the department will see much more."

Flaherty asserted that Carter's statements would have no effect on the investigation and said, "I think he would want it that way."

Flaherty said he spoke Thursday with two of the three department lawyers handling the case and assured them that the investigation would continue "as expeditiously as possible."

Arms pact extension opposed by Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's decision to unilaterally remain under the restrictions of the expiring strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union is swiftly encountering opposition from Congress.

The administration position was disclosed Thursday in a letter from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, John J. Sparkman, D-Ala..

Vance decided on the tactic when it became apparent that the current Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty, signed in 1972, would expire on Oct. 3 without a new U.S.-Soviet agreement to replace it.

Vance and President Carter were continuing negotiations today with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the White House.

Vance said in his Thursday letter that the United States will honor the expiring agreement "provided the Soviet Union exercise similar restraint."

Questioned by reporters about Soviet intentions, Gromyko was noncommittal Thursday. But State Department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters later that he believes the Soviet Union also will issue a statement pledging continued adherence to the 1972 agreement.

That agreement, known as SALT I, sets limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers.

The Vance statement brought immediate signs of an impending clash between the administration and defense-oriented members of Congress.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., was said by aides to be planning hearings on the administration plan. Jackson heads the Senate Armed Services Committee's subcommittee on arms control.

Jackson is regarded as one of the Senate's most knowledgeable arms experts and other senators often look to him for guidance on this issue. He has been an outspoken critic of the arms policies of past administrations, claiming they made excessive concessions to the Soviets.

Jackson led the Senate opposition to the first SALT pact in 1972.

But Vance received key endorsements for his policy from Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., the chairman of the House International Relations Committee, and the ranking minority member, William S. Broomfield, D-Mich.

Essentially at issue is the question of whether such an informal extension of the SALT agreement is properly subject to congressional review. An arms control law states that congressional consent is required on any action that limits U.S. armaments.

Dayton city manager opposes collective bargaining measure

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dayton's city manager, veteran of a 2 1/2-day strike by firefighters, has warned state legislators that "strikes will continue to occur" after passage of a public employes collective bargaining bill.

City Manager James A. Alloway told a House-Senate Conference Committee Thursday that the city had local ordinances, similar to provisions in a bill the lawmakers are seeking agreement on.

Sen. Harry Meshel, D-33 Youngstown, sponsor of the bill and chairman of the committee, has said the state plan would head off strikes by safety workers, such as the walkout in Dayton last month.

Dayton already has a law that recognizes and defines employe bargaining units, provides "very sophisticated" impasse mechanisms and bars strikes by public employes, he said.

Meshel's bill does many of the same things, but it also repeals the anti-strike Ferguson Act and gives 500,000 state, county and municipal workers a limited, last resort, right to strike.

Committee members did not get to the point of discussing areas of difference between House and Senate versions. The House bill, approved before summer recess in July, is regarded as more acceptable to government officials and less favorable to organized labor.

Meshel set a second conference meeting for Tuesday, but majority Democratic leaders are not optimistic that agreement can be reached before adjournment of the present session later next week.

The Dayton strike slowed a process that was already moving slower than unions would like because of disagreement over how many concessions should be made to labor.

"Even with the passage of a state collective bargaining bill, we predict that strikes will continue to occur," Alloway testified. "Therefore our cities must have the management and supervisory capacity to provide a minimum level of protection until the strike is settled."

Stock market retreats again

NEW YORK (AP) —The stock market retreated again today, faced with persistent concern over rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials lost a fraction in early trading.

Declines took a small lead over advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Federal Reserve reported a $2 billion increase in the basic measure of the money supply late Thursday.

Analysts noted that the news sparked fears of continued credit-tightening by the Fed.

Today's early prices included Continental Oil, unchanged at 29; Raytheon, up 1/4 at 30 1/2, and Vetco, up 1/8 at 19 1/4.

Escapee held in abduction

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — An escapee from the Indiana Girls School was arrested late Thursday night in connection with the alleged abduction of an infant baby who was found in an alley here Monday.

The arrest came several hours after the baby, Shawn Michael Gibson, was reunited with his mother, Mrs. Cathy Gibson of Crittenden, Ky.

A police public information officer said the girl, 16, was arrested at 10:30 by police and the FBI. She was charged only with being an escapee from the girls school. Her name was not disclosed because of her age, the spokesman said.

"I feel like I'm having him all over again," cried Mrs. Gibson while cradling the blond-haired baby at the police station. "I'm scared to death. It feels so good."

Mrs. Gibson, 23, and Shawn had to remain overnight in Hammond because the FBI and local welfare authorities wanted more information about the baby's disappearance Sunday night.

An FBI official said Shawn apparently was a kidnap victim, but not for ransom. The girl taken into custody, said by police to have been the Crittenden's babysitter, allegedly took the child by bus from Kentucky on the 275-mile trip to northwest Indiana and abandoned the boy.

A Hammond man, Jim Hall, found Shawn in the alley behind his house. The baby was in good health at the time.

The baby was identified when his grandmother saw his picture in the Vincennes, Ind., Sun-Commercial. Kentucky state troopers took Mrs. Gibson to Hammond on Wednesday, but she had to wait until Thursday for the reunion because of the police investigation.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a recent debate on TV quality, ABC programs chief Fred Silverman said a lot of ideas submitted for programs are awful. On Saturday, ABC will premiere a prime-time example.

It's "Love Boat," a new one-hour series trying for romance and comedy aboard a cruise ship, the Pacific Princess. It's sort of a bad "Love, American Style" with life preservers.

Gavin MacLeod, a good actor last regularly seen on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show," plays the captain of ABC's ship of foolish.

Other regulars are Lauren Tewes as a pretty cruise director, Fred Grandy as a mildly dense assistant purser, Bernie Koppel as the ship's doctor and Ted Lange as the ship's barkeep.

As is the custom with most new ABC ventures, Saturday's yarn features guest stars of established series on the theory they'll bring their fans with them and thus boost opening-night ratings.

On hand from CBS is Bonnie Franklin of "One Day at a Time" and Jimmie Walker of "Good Times." ABC's delegates are Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company" and Meredith Baxter-Birney of "Family."

NBC is a no-show, but so is "Love Boat," which spins three tales by as many writers during its maiden voyage to various Mexican ports.

Miss Franklin plays a nasty, domineering woman wed to a director of the company owning the ship. As she boards, Grandy makes a big fuss over her. Sneers she: "Lord, I love an obsequious runt."

She also is harsh with MacLeod, but for reasons that are too personal and predictable to go into now — or ever.

Miss Baxter-Birney is on the cruise with her fiancé, a handsome young congressman. She is worried he'll find out she is the centerfold lady in a Playboy-like magazine called "Kitten."

More hay for Billy

Billy Carter recently observed that after selling his peanut warehouse in Plains he was "itching to find something else to get into." He seems to have found it. In a reversal of his usual role, he is getting into beer.

Some may take offense at this, figuring that the brother of the President of the United States ought to be involved in a business with a little more class. We are not much impressed with this argument. Selling beer is an enterprise as honest and respectable as others that may seem tonier.

We do confess ourselves a bit put off by certain aspects of Billy Carter's new business venture. The beer he will be promoting on his travels about the country is not just any old brew, but "Billy" beer. Its label bears his signature under these inspiring words: "Brewed especially for and with the approval of one of America's all-time great beer drinkers, Billy Carter."

The brewer of "Billy" beer is on record as saying: "By no means are we entering into this relationship with Billy Carter merely to capitalize on a fad or exploit a currently popular personality." Billy himself seems to have neither illusions nor qualms on this score. He's been making hay while the presidential sun shines, and plainly intends to continue doing so. Who's to object - save maybe sports who think that such blatant capitalizing on being the brother of the President is an affront to that high office?

Washington Merry-Go-Round

First, they prayed

WASHINGTON — The first morning that Bert Lance faced his Senate inquisitors, he dropped by the oval office for a quiet prayer with President Carter.

The beleaguered budget director slipped into the White House at daybreak, just before Washington sprang to life. He brought three Bible passages — 1 Peter 2:17-25, Joshua 1:5-7 and Ecclesiastes 3:1-8 — which he read aloud.

"For this is thankworthy," Lance read from First Peter, "if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully."

"For what glory is it if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? But if, when ye do well and suffer for it, yet take it patiently, this is acceptable with God."

From Joshua, Lance emphasized these lines: "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. . . Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law."

He also read the famous passage from Ecclesiastes: "To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose under the heaven. . . A time to break down and a time to build up; A time to weep and a time to laugh. . . A time to keep silence and a time to speak."

After quoting the scripture, Lance uttered a brief prayer. Then the president also prayed out loud and Lance departed for his first day under the kleig lights.

Later in the oval office, President Carter mused quietly: "I was talking the other day, just a group of us who have been close, and we all decided that if we could have named 2,000 different things that might have caused me any problem or any embarrassment, that Bert Lance's character would have been the last thing we would have guessed about."

The president showed no inclination to fire Lance, "I have never been convinced, at least until this moment, that Bert Lance has done anything illegal or unethical," said Carter. "And if I should find that he did, my guess is that Bert and I would decide together that he ought to resign."

He was troubled by the unfair impact, he said, of the "almost unbelievable accumulation of allegations." As he put it: "Even if they are all false (this) provides some people with a chance to say, well, even if he is innocent, his effectiveness has been damaged or destroyed."

"I can't bring myself to accept the fairness of that. . . My judgment of the American people is still unshaken and I think to the extent that they are familiar with the facts, do understand the charges, do understand Bert's reaction. . ."

The president interrupted himself to suggest that, in the end, people will rely on his assessment. "I think in the long run, for many American people, I will be the final judge. If I say I think Bert ought to step down, I think they will say, well, that is okay. If I should decide I think Bert ought to stay on, I think many people will say that is okay."

Carter conceded that Lance had made some mistakes. "He did some things he shouldn't have done," said the president. "He had bank overdrafts and he shouldn't have done it. Nobody claims that you ought to have bank overdrafts. But there was nothing there that would interfere with his proper performance of duty."

Because of his close friendship with Lance, Carter acknowledged, he was going through personal anguish. "This has been one of the most difficult things I have had to face. . .," he said. "It is the kind of question that you don't know how to handle, because I have to balance what is good for my loyalty to Bert, compared to what is good for my strength and effectiveness as president."

The president recalled that the late Harry Truman had stood by his friends but had survived the test of history. Carter wondered aloud whether the newspapers would admit their misjudgment if it turned out they were wrong about Lance.

"If it turns out in balance," reflected the president, "that he is a good man, a decent man, a competent man, an honest man, it is going to be a great test of the press to see whether or not they can admit that they have made a mistake. Or will (they) try to prove that they were right all the time by continuing, maybe unnecessarily, their allegations against him?"

Yet Carter agreed that "the press has done what it ought to do in a free society."

Project Max: Last year, Congress turned down funds for a futuristic, $800 million Air Force computer system called Project Max. Yet the Air Force secretly continued spending money on the project anyway.

Now the man who allegedly tried to cover up the wrongful spending, ex-Air Force Secretary Thomas Reed, is organizing the new Department of Energy for James Schlesinger.

Members of Congress confirm that Reed is still giving them the runaround, as he did with Project Max last year.

A secret Senate memo charges that Reed "turns out to be one of the key players in last year's Air Force Project Max procurement horror story."

If Reed hadn't quietly approved the retroactive funding for the controversial computer system, the memo declares, "some generals might have landed in jail."

Couple protests state refusal to OK baby's hyphenated name

FOWLER, Ohio (AP) — Ohioans may think they're the ones that decide what their children are named, but a couple in this northeastern community has discovered that freedom only goes so far.

Officials had no problems accepting Dienne Powell's decision to keep her own name when she married Curtiss Kieffer, but when the couple had a son whom they wanted to name Morgan McKenna Powell-Kieffer, the state objected.

State statutes don't mandate that offspring of married couples carry the surnames of their fathers, but the state division of vital statistics won't accept anything else, no matter what the parents say.

"If the birth occurred in lawful wedlock the child is registered in the name of the father," said Karl Wise, chief of the statistics division.

Dienne and Curtiss discovered the policy when the birth certificate for their son was rejected by the Trumbull County office of vital statistics which gets its instructions from the state. The certificate had been filled out by the doctor present at the March 1975 delivery who had written in the hyphenated name.

The couple refused to change their decision on their son's name and eventually the county office went ahead and recorded the certificate with Powell inserted as a middle name.

Dienne and Curtiss wrote protest letters and visited state and county offices with their complaint, but were not satisfied with the response they received.

"They were polite about it, but most their attitudes were 'go away, you bother me,'" Dienne said.

Finally the couple went to the American Civil Liberties Union in Youngstown which agreed to take the case. They are awaiting results of an appeal after the case was dismissed in federal court.

Wise said the state's procedures are based on a manual issued by the health department director which says a child's last name depends upon the marital status of the mother. When the mother is married, the law assumes the child is that of the mother's husband and for consistency the husband's last name is the one that goes on record, he said.

"Until either the law is changed or until the courts say this procedure is wrong, we will follow it," Wise said. "It's based on tradition. We are not bound by tradition, but we are trying to preserve consistency."

A bill introduced by Rep. David Hartley, D-60 Springfield, in April is aimed at changing the practice. It would put the rights of parents to name their children whatever they choose into the statutes.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Law says divorce must be published

DEAR ABBY: You've often heard the line, "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby," but this time, you were so off base, I had to write.

You told MINNESOTA that she requested that the news of her divorce be withheld from publication, the editor would probably respect her wishes.

Baloney! I don't know about Minnesota, but in Iowa divorces are published by law.

We sometimes publish divorces as news-not on our front page, but usually listed with other court house records-whether or not we're requested to keep it confidential.

Some newspapers in this area publish entire court proceedings on the front page-"blow by blow," so to speak.

Please don't go telling your readers they may edit their local newspapers. With your background, you should know better.

DEAR ABBY: I play softball, and not to brag, but I'm considered a pretty good player.

There's a girl I sort of hang around with. I'm not really all that involved with her, but she's been coming around to watch me play quite a lot lately, and that's my problem.

Last season I didn't mind her watching me play, and I played okay, but this season, for some dumb reason, every time I see her I get nervous and I play lousy. maybe I'd play lousy, anyway, but when I see her there, I play extra lousy.

How can I get her not to come around when I'm playing without getting her mad at me? She's a neat kid and I don't want to hurt her feelings.

SOFTBALL SOFTY
DEAR ABBY: Level with her. Tell her you want to find out for sure if you're playing lousy because she's there. She might be flattered to learn that you think her presence is affecting your game.

DEAR ABBY: I am 25 and female. Last year I bought a watch, which I treasured. It cost $145-a lot of money for me. I had to save a long time to buy it.

I wore it one day with a fellow I was sort of going with. He makes good money and has a government job. We went for a drive and decided to wade out into a stream so I took my watch off and he locked it in the glove compartment of his car.

After he took me home and drove off (he lives 200 miles away) I realized my watch was in his car. I called him that very night and asked him to please put my watch in a safe place until we met again.

Well, every time we met after that he said he "forgot" my watch. It's been a year now and he says he doesn't know what happened to it, and he's given up the search, so I had better get another one. It wasn't insured and he never offered to replace it. My feelings toward him are ambivalent. I don't especially want to see him, but this watch business has upset me. If you were in my place, what would you do?

DEAR "E": I'd buy myself another watch, but I wouldn't give the fellow who "lost" it the time of day.

'Second Enoch' redated at Duke

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
 AP Religion Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — An old book called "Second Enoch," once disregarded as a late fabrication but now considered current in Judaism in the days of Jesus, says, "in the great time to come are many rooms prepared."
 The words resemble Jesus' comment in John 14:2: "In my Father's house are many rooms ... I go to prepare a place for you."
 This and other similarities to Jesus' teaching in numerous old manuscripts indicate the cross-pollinating ideas at work in his time, now that new evidence has caused the formerly ignored writings to be redated in the period of his ministry.
 "They're opening a whole new perspective on first-century Judaism in the days of Jesus," says the Rev. Dr. James H. Charlesworth, director of Duke University's International Center for the Study of Christian Origins.

 "They bring out the influences around him as much richer and more varied than was known before and also his great genius in dealing with the intellectual ferment and tendencies of the times."
 The treasure-trove of newly authenticated material, swelled by recently turned-up finds and including previously discounted books of the so-called "pseudepigrapha," is being translated into English by an international team of scholars for their first full publication.
 Through the documents, "we now know that in the time of Christian origins, we can't clearly determine just what literature is distinctly Jewish and what also is Christian," says Dr. Charlesworth, editor for the project being carried out by Duke's Pseudepigrapha Institute.

 "They're all Jewish documents," he adds, "yet many also include specifically Christian concepts. It shows us just how very, very Jewish Christianity was in its beginnings."
 Thus far, the project has accumulated 47 books classified as originally composed in the interval between 167 B.C. and 135 A.D. They're to be published by Doubleday & Co. about 1980.

Mr. Moser of the Life Squad guest speaker for Delta CCL

Mrs. Dwight Duff called the meeting of the Delta Child Conservation League to order in the home of Mrs. Wilbur Fleming. She introduced Mr. Ed Moser, a member of the Fayette County Life Squad as the guest speaker. A very interesting talk was presented. He stated that the Life Squad was formed on Jan. 1, 1977, and there are 60 strained Emergency Medical Technicians (EMT's). The Life Squad driver must be 21 years of age or older with no previous driving convictions. The Life Squad EMT's go through 90 hours of training with 12 hours "in" hospital training. The EMT's do not administer any drugs or medications, they do, however, use all life saving methods possible. The Squad is county owned and voluntarily operated service.

They have purchased radios that communicated directly to the hospital and have received four new Life Squad vehicles. Therefore, they are better able to serve the whole of Fayette County. The only person that is paid a salary is the Life Squad Co-ordinator, who handles the bookkeeping and records for the Life Squad. The yearly rate is $15 for a family or person, or $10 for persons or people over 60 years of age.

Mrs. Malcolm Bloomer read devotions titled "Fall House Cleaning." Thank you notes were read from the Fayette Progressive School and Mrs. Robert Browning, Past president of Delta CCL. Mrs. Art Schaefer read the minutes of the previous meeting.

It was announced that the 57th annual OCCL State Convention will be Oct. 12 and 13 at the Biltmore Hotel in Dayton with the Dayton Federation as hostess. Deadline for reservations is Oct. 1. These may be made with Mrs. Duff.

A letter was read from the State OCCL President Ernestine Heusel, concerning the convention. All new leagues in the state are invited.

Mrs. Will Braun and Mrs. Wilbur Rapp assisted Mrs. Fleming in the serving of refreshments.

Those present were Mrs. Bloomer, Mrs. Braun, Mrs. Robert Browning, Mrs. Fred Cook, Mrs. John Cook, Mrs. Dwight Duff, Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. David Krupla, Mrs. Tom Mossbarger, Mrs. Roger Rapp, Mrs. Wilbur Rapp and Mrs. Art Schaefer.

The Oct. 17th meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Robert Browning when the Rev. Phillip Brooks of Grace Methodist Church will be guest speaker. Mrs. Dwight Duff and Mrs. Mossbarger will be the assisting hostesses.

Statistics of shoplifting given BPW by Security Supervisor

Washington Country Club was the setting for the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club. The Personal Development Committee was in charge of the meeting with Mrs. Jean King, chairman. Members of the committee present were Mrs. Ann Cluff, Mrs. Mary Ellen Dellinger, Mrs. Glenna Lindsey, Mrs. Marie Mace, Mrs. Medrith Mitchell and Mrs. Loreah O'Brian.

Mary Ellen Dellinger gave the invocation and Sara Echard, vice president, led the Pledge of Allegiance. Loreah O'Brian presented Jenny Harper and Jill Leggett, Girls-of-the-Month, who told of their plans for the future. Paula Campbell sang a medley of the Barbara Streisand songs, accompanied by Elaine Stookey.

Phil L. Pettitt from Columbus, employed as Supervisor of Security in the downtown Lazarus Store, was guest speaker for the evening. He related some of the statistics on shoplifting, and said that Lazarus has the third largest police agency in Central Ohio. They have police protection 24 hours per day and seven days per week. He said that shoplifting is the fastest growing and largest crime. Crime was up 13 per cent over last year. Nationally four and one-half billion dollars has been lost in shoplifting in one year, with four million dollars in Ohio for one year.

He stated there is no certain class of people that can be classified as shoplifters; they have arrested people from all professions and classes of people. Juveniles make up 50 to 55 percent of the shoplifters. Women and young girls do most of the shoplifting. Lazarus had 6,000 crimes committed by shoplifting or other crimes of which 75 to 80 per cent were prosecuted by fine and jail sentence. They had 2600 shoplifters last year.

Lazarus has a program of Crime Prevention which consists of escorts to cars if the customer so desires, dog patrol in some instances, off duty motorcycle police in garages and public awareness by advertisement and signs in the stores. Lazarus is making every effort to make shopping in their downtown store and stores in the shopping centers safe and enjoyable.

Mary Lou Christman, president, conducted the business when reports were made by Martha Graves, Mary Lou Joseph and Ann Marvin. Sara Echard also reported on the Fall District Meeting held Sept. 18 at the Buckeye Lodge in Wilmington. Betty Johnson read the ABC's of the BPW Club.

Colt quarterback honorary chief

Jones named NHF Day chairman

RIVERSIDE, CT — Bert Jones, best known for his touchdown passes as star quarterback of the Baltimore Colts, will also be helping to call the plays for this year's National Hunting and Fishing Day in his role as Honorary Chairman for NHF Day 1977.

An avid hunter and fisherman in the off-season, Jones recently explained his interest in National Hunting and Fishing Day to more than 250 members of the Outdoor Writers Association of America at their annual meeting in Macon, Georgia. "I've been aware of National Hunting and Fishing Day for some time, and I am certainly in total agreement with what the day is trying to do — to show all Americans that there is a lot more to hunting and fishing than guns and fishing poles. We all know how important hunting and fishing are to conservation in this country, but I doubt that many non-sportsmen realize the importance of the hunters and fisherman to the conservation scene.

"I am sure most people would be quite surprised to hear that sportsmen provide the American conservation movement with more than $250 million a year," Jones said. He also commented that $250 million a year is even more than some pro quarterbacks earn.

"On National Hunting and Fishing Day millions will learn what they can do to insure clean lakes and streams in the decades ahead," Jones explained. "Participants in NHF Day programs will have an opportunity not only to learn to cast or shoot. They'll learn how to enjoy the outdoors while helping to conserve our natural resources for future generations. Basically, that's what National Hunting and Fishing Day is about, and I'm happy to be part of it as Honorary National Chairman," Jones concluded.

Saturday, September 24th will mark the sixth annual observance of National Hunting and Fishing Day; and thousands of programs are being planned all across the nation. The day has traditionally been recognized by the President, all 50 governors and over 500 mayors. It is also officially endorsed by more than 40 of the nation's leading conservation groups, including the National Wildlife Federation, Wildlife Management Institute, Izaak Walton League and the Wildlife Society.

Persons interested in attending the NHF Day activities in their communities should watch for further announcements or contact their local sportsmen's club or sporting goods store.

BERT JONES HONORARY CHAIRMAN — In his role as Honorary Chairman of National Hunting and Fishing Day, September 24, 1977, Bert Jones will be helping to inform all Americans of the sportsman's role in conservation while urging public participation in NHF Day activities.

Estimate 20 million on National Hunt, Fish Day

It might be the worst day of the year for fishing, and most hunting seasons will have hardly begun, but that will not prevent Saturday, September 24 from being the greatest day of the year for this nation's sportsmen. All across the land, in an endless variety of outdoor activities, an estimated 20 million Americans will participate in National Hunting and Fishing Day in recognition of the sportsman's role in conservation.

Traditionally proclaimed by the President, all 50 governors and over 500 mayors, and endorsed by 40 of the nation's leading conservation groups, National Hunting and Fishing Day is intended to enlist the support of all Americans in the conservation effort.

On September 24, the last Saturday in that month, sportsmen's clubs and conservation groups will celebrate NHF Day with an incredible array of activities at shopping centers, sportsmen's clubs, town parks, and at a wide variety of locations in between.

From the Village Square Shopping Center in Dodge City, Kansas, to the Maple Hill Mall in Kalamazoo, Michigan, for example, hundreds of shopping centers across the map will host conservation exhibits and outdoor demonstrations of every description. While Mom marvels at a retriever exhibition in the parking area, her son will receive his first lesson in bait-casting from members of the local anglers' club. On her way from the hairdresser to the drugstore, a lady shopper might pass by a conservation display where she will be amazed to learn how duck hunters have funneled over $30 million into Canada to increase the number of mallards in Mississippi.

At more than 2,000 sportsmen's clubs across the land, hunters and fishermen will offer free instruction in shooting, casting, archery, plus numerous conservation displays to interest every member of the family.

Americans have long been aware of our nation's environmental problems, but in many cases the problem is not brought home on a local level until an NHF Day exhibit reveals what the local sportsmen's club is doing to clean a nearby stream or rescue an irreplaceable marsh from destruction.

National Hunting and Fishing Day is the one day in which all sportsmen can join with those who do not hunt or fish in the interest of wildlife and conservation.

Preseason activities for better hunting

To most hunters, getting ready for a new season afield means cleaning a couple of shotguns, touching up a dozen well-worn decoys or waterproofing a pair of comfortable old boots that you hope will hold up for just one more year. These preseason rituals are important, but there are also a number of activities you can get involved with right now that will help make you a more skilled hunter and better sportsman as well. Here are some ways to go about it.

Wildlife study — How much do you really know about the game animals that you hunt: their life cycles, daily and seasonal movements, food and habitat preferences, tracks and droppings? A real understanding of such key characteristics of each of your favorite game species will go a long way in making you a more successful hunter. But just as important, this knowledge will make each day in the field a far more interesting and enjoyable experience, whether you fire a shot or not.

There are many fine wildlife books available, and a check at your local library or bookstore or a look at the ads in one of the outdoor magazines should turn up the volumes you need. Also, be sure to contact your state wildlife agency. They'll likely have a variety of informative booklets and pamphlets on the popular game species in your state.

If you're a duck hunter, a particularly important area of wildlife study is waterfowl identification. The ability to quickly and accurately identify ducks on the wing is crucial in those states using a "point system" for determining daily bag limits and is a basic responsibility that must be assumed by waterfowlers everywhere.

State and local waterfowl associations and sportsmen's clubs often feature I.D. films (made available from I.D. organizations such as Ducks Unlimited) during their summer meetings. Audubon Society chapters also sponsor excellent waterfowl study films and lectures.

Landowner relations — If you're one of the millions of hunters who hunt on someone else's land, there are some things you can do this summer to insure that you'll be a welcome guest in the fall. Why not drop by the landowner's home some weekend to renew acquaintances? Were there any problems last season with litter, too much shooting or the like? Is there anything that you and your hunting friends can do to help him out on the farm before the season begins? A special effort of this kind shows that you don't take your guest privileges for granted and is much appreciated by the landowner.

There are a lot of things that go into the definition of a sportsman. Certainly two of them are a knowledge of wildlife and courtesy to landowners. You can get started on both right now.

Muzzle-loader piece of history

The old-fashioned muzzle-loading rifle has played an indelible place in American history and is now blazing such an incredible comeback that there may well be more black powder shooters in America today than during the Revolution more than 200 years ago.

Black powder shooting, or "charcoal-burning" as it is referred to by its more devout practitioners, is one of the fastest growing of all sports and without doubt the fastest growing of the shooting sports. It is estimated that there are about one million muzzle-loading shooters in the U.S. today—nearly double the number in 1970. In addition, the sport is growing at a rate of about 10 per cent a year.

The enthusiasm and respect for tradition of the typical black powder shooter is most visible at the National Muzzle Loading Rifle Championships held each fall on the grounds of the National Loading Rifle Association in Friendship, Indiana.

Thousands of shooters gather each fall, most in authentic buckskin attire, to compete against the best muzzle-loading shooters in the world.

Accuracy the name of the game in shooting

Hunters and shooters go to great lengths to make sure the bullet they fire finds its mark, whether that mark is a game animal or a paper target. Volumes and volumes have been written on perfecting the rifle itself. The barrel, the action, the stock. Shooters often spend as much on a scope as they do on the rifle, then spend many hours sighting the rifle in. Favorite shooting positions are practiced and equipment is brought to perfection, all in the name of accuracy. Because only accuracy will win a competitive shoot, and only accuracy will assure a clean, sportsmanlike shot when hunting game.

But the great equalizer in the game of accuracy is the bullet itself. Shooters trying to attain the ultimate accuracy almost universally reload their own ammunition to attain the perfect combination of case, primer, powder and bullet. While bullet manufacturers provide complete manuals of loading data, accomplished reloaders are constantly "working up" loads for specific purposes. . . accuracy, range, hitting power, etc. Powder, for instance, is measured down to a tenth of a grain on precision scales.

When a shooter selects his bullets, he has a choice of several weights within a certain caliber and often a choice between bullet styles, such as Spitzer, hollow point or flat point. The typical bullet is made up of a lead core, surrounded by a copper alloy jacket.

Each bullet manufacturer has taken great pains to design each specific bullet in each weight in each caliber for the best flight characteristics, best balance and best stopping power on game.

But, as John Nosler, President of Nosler Bullets, Inc., says, "Accuracy is the ultimate test of the bullet maker. All of the design, innovation and manufacturing expertise which go into the production of bullets for hunting and competitive shooting must prove themselves on the range where a small group speaks louder than any advertising claims."

Nosler, who pioneered an impact extrusion method of making bullets as opposed to forming bullets from coin-shaped blanks, entered the bullet business with his now-famous Partition bullet, a divided core bullet designed specifically for big game because of its ability to hold together upon impact. More recently, Nosler Bullets has developed the Solid Case bullet, a single core bullet with a heavier base and tapered jacket designed for both accuracy and striking power.

Since Nosler was the smallest of the major bullet manufacturers, the company decided to conduct a series of accuracy tests to prove its claim to better accuracy. Such a test is not as simple as taking a rifle out on the range and drilling holes in a target. A specially constructed shooting tunnel, 100 yards long, is the range. The rifles, for different weights and calibers of bullets, are mounted on a machine rest to avoid the variations that could be caused by windage, barrel movement, shooter movement or prejudice by the shooter.

Bullets were selected at random from those manufactured by Nosler and the three leading bullet manufacturers and were loaded according to specifications of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers' Institute (SAAMI). Powders and primers were changed within each test to make the competition as fair as possible.

Ten groups of five shots each were fired for each of 11 calibers or weights for each brand. . . a total of more than 2,000 rounds.

Nosler didn't expect to win all of the groups, and didn't. But it proved what it set out to do. . . that its Solid Base bullets are more accurate than those made by the world's best bullet manufacturers. In the aggregate, Nosler's groups were 10 per cent smaller than the others.

But, as Nosler points out, "the ultimate test will be conducted by handloaders who try our Solid Base bullets on the range and in the field."

Nosler has published a report on its accuracy tests entitled "Accuracy '77" which is available at no charge by writing Nosler Bullets, Inc., P.O. Box 688, Beaverton, Oregon 97005.

TEST RIFLE — A specially built rifle held by a "machine rest" was used by Nosler Bullets, Inc. during extensive accuracy tests on their bullets and those of three competitors. This machine rest eliminates the possibility of any human errors or prejudice when firing test groups on the indoor, 100-yard range.

Thousands involved in state conservation

The wildlife conservation programs of state fish and game departments add up to a vast undertaking, one involving thousands of people working for the well-being of hundreds of species of birds, animals and fish, game and non-game species alike, on millions of acres of land and water.

Modern game and fish departments are staffed by highly trained career biologists and wildlife management specialists, responsible for projects such as improving wildlife habitat through planting food and cover, constructing marshes and ponds, or clearing woodlands to create the meadows essential to many birds and animals. They also carry out wildlife management research, restocking programs, and investigate the control of wildlife diseases.

This costs a tremendous amount of money, hundreds of millions of dollars every year.

Unlike other state governmental agencies, fish and game departments receive little support from taxes paid by the general public. Instead, virtually all their operating funds come from the outdoor fraternity of hunters and fishermen.

This means that hunters and fishermen are paying, as they have for many years, almost all of the bills for practical wildlife conservation and paying them not just for their own benefit, but for the benefit of all Americans.

Hunters alone, dating as far back as the 1920's, have paid the lion's share for conservation, so far a massive $3 billion; and, through three major avenues, are presently paying over $225 million a year.

License fees are the largest portion of the hunter's contribution to state fish and game departments, presently furnishing them with over $155 million a year.

Going as far back in some states as 1923, revenue from hunting licenses has raised over $2.3 billion to help make the American system of wildlife management the best and most successful in the world today.

The knowledge of how this money is gathered and how it is spent for the benefit of wildlife contributes greatly to an understanding of the overall conservation picture, and the hunter's important relationship to it.

WORKING FOR WILDLIFE — Thanks to the work of trained conservation professionals such as this one, the nation's whitetail deer population is now estimated at more than 12 million — much higher than it was 50 years ago. The bulk of the money to fund wildlife management comes from the nation's sportsmen.

Thanks to sportsman-supported management programs:

There are now some 15 million deer in the United States. There were only 500,000 in 1900.

There are about five times as many elk in the nation today as there were 60 years ago, and about seven times as many antelope.

Turkeys numbered less than 100,000 at recently at 1952, now total well over 1,250,000.

Our hats off to America's hunters and fishermen — this nation's foremost true supporters of wildlife conservation.

For this area's best selection of guns, shooting supplies and boats of all types at reasonable prices stop by . . .

Would you like to start archery

Would you like to try archery but don't know how to get started? It's as easy as rolling off a log. The first and most important step is a visit to your local archery store. There are over 8,000 archery dealers in the United States, so chances are there's one near your home. If you don't know where the nearest archery shop is, simply look under "Archery" in the Yellow Pages of your telephone book.

An archery store is an interesting place. The walls are lined with bows of every shape, size and color under the sun. Arrows bristle out of boxes like spring wildflowers, and hundreds of shooting accessories and other archery gizmos line the shelves. The air is filled with the pleasant odors of new leather and cedar arrows. It's fun to just browse around awhile, gazing at bows, arrows, targets, arrow quivers and dozens of other objects you may or may not recognize.

Your archery dealer is there to help you learn about this enjoyable sport. He will answer your questions about shooting equipment, give you pointers on how to shoot properly and introduce you to other archers in your community. Before you know it, you may belong to an archery club and be visiting your archery store regularly to gaze at the goodies on the shelves, chew the fat with your dealer and dream about the record score you'll shoot next time the archery club gets together for an action-packed day of target competition and good clean fun.

A visit to your archery store can be a real eye-opener. This is where friendly people with a common interest gather to look over gear and talk about their sport. It's the very best place to learn about the challenging and exciting world of archery.

EQUIPMENT AND INFORMATION — Your local archery retailer is stocked with a wide assortment of quality archery equipment and is also packed with information to help you decide what type of gear is best for your hunting or target shooting needs.

How to select the proper hunting bow

Confused about which hunting bow to buy? It's not surprising. There are literally dozens of makes and models available these days, all the way from inexpensive one-piece "kid's bows" to complicated mechanical bows. This wide selection is certainly mind-boggling at first.

Don't worry? Choosing a hunting bow is actually fun and easy after you learn a few facts. For example, there are only two basic kinds of hunting bows sold today—recurve bows and compound bows. Each bow style has certain advantages.

A recurve bow consists of a short handle section with long, slender limbs curving out on either end. This kind of bow is fairly inexpensive, extremely light in weight and ruggedly simple. It is easy to transport in the woods and has no moving parts to break or wear out.

A typical compound bow consists of a fairly long handle set between two short limbs. These limbs are held together with a network of cables and wheels. A compound bow has two basic advantages over recurve bow. First, it is easier to draw and hold. A compound bow reaches a "peak draw weight" when the bow-string is pulled back about halfway, then "lets off" in draw weight from 20 to 50 per cent as the bowstring is pulled on back to full draw. For example, a 60-pound compound bow designed to let off 50 per cent allows a bowhunter to hold only 30 pounds of pressure with his bowstring fingers while he aims. This weight let-off prevents muscle strain and leads to accurate shooting.

A compound bow is also capable of shooting a lighter arrow than a recurve bow, which means faster arrow flight and flatter arrow trajectory for surer hits on animals at unknown distances.

Some bowhunters prefer recurve bows for simplicity, light carrying weight and a modest price tag. Others prefer heavier, more complicated bows because they cause less muscle strain and shoot a faster arrow. Which basic

Questions answered in free pamphlet

Come the day when the settlers on your block have routed the last redskin, when your backyard cowboy and his trusty cap pistol have freed the neighborhood of the last rustler, your son or daughter will want a gun — a real gun.

Cropping up usually between the ages of 10 and 13, this request normally brings several questions to mind for the youngster's parents. Among the questions most frequently posed are: Is my youngster old enough? How safe is shooting? Why do youngsters like shooting? Are organized activities available? Where can we find instruction? How do we get started?

The answers to all of these questions, and more, can be found in a free 10-page folder available from the National Shooting Sports Foundation, Box 59, Riverside, Conn. 06878. All requests must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Sight in with both eyes

Two eyes are always better than one

Despite the tendency of most beginners to close one eye when looking down the barrel of a shotgun, the skilled wingshooter almost invariably does his shooting with both eyes wide open. Does he know something the neophyte doesn't? You can bet on it. The experienced shotgunner is aware that two eyes see more than one, that with both eyes open his peripheral vision, being twice as extensive, enables him to pick up a moving target more quickly, no matter what its direction. He also knows that his "master eye" will take over automatically and properly line up the shotgun with the target, thus making certain he hits where he looks.

How can you establish which one is your master eye? Very easily. Keep both eyes open, point your finger at some object a few feet away. Close your left eye. If your finger and the object remain aligned, your right eye is your master eye. However, if your finger suddenly shifts to one side of the object when you close your left eye, then that one is your master eye.

You can double check by reversing the procedure. In other words, close your master eye and line up on the object with the other eye. Now, open both eyes and watch your finger and the object jump out of alignment.

Generally, the right eye is the righthander's master eye; the left eye is the lefthander's master eye. The exceptions usually have to switch and shoot from their master eye side or obtain specially built stocks.

Next to determining which is your master eye, proper shotgun fit is the most important consideration in hitting where you look. Fine double barreled shotguns like the Winchester Model 21 are stocked to the customer's exact specifications as to length of pull, drop at comb, drop at heel, pitch and cast-on or cast-off. But production guns must necessarily be stocked with the average shooter in mind. If you're fortunate enough to have an average build, then you shouldn't have any major problems with proper shotgun fit.

If, for example, though, you have very long arms or a short neck, you will definitely require some alterations to your shotgun stock in order to hit where you look. A good gunsmith can detect and make the necessary alterations for you to insure that your off-the-rack shotgun will fit you properly. Once it does, every time you snap it up to your shoulder and pull the trigger, you'll know that you'll hit right where you're looking.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT — Most skilled wingshooters get that way through lots of practice, and by knowing a few fundamentals about how to hit where they look. Here a scattergunner enjoys shattering clay targets at a Winchester Franchised Public Shooting Center.

Americans more environment conscious

Americans, by and large, were never as environment-conscious as they are today. Ecology has become a household word with the growing concern about cleaner air and water and the protection of our natural resources.

This is as it should be, but too many last-hour crusaders on the environmental front seem to have lost sight of one fundamental fact — much of what we are today trying to save would not be around at all were it not for the farsighted effort of this nation's hunters and fishermen. These sportsmen started the American conservation movement back in the 1800's, and they remain the backbone of conservation today.

Fisherman first got wind of the problem as their favorite trout streams and bass ponds became polluted with industrial waste and other sewage, but their complaints about the dead fish fell upon deaf ears. No one seemed concerned about a few dead fish. And no one seemed to realize that they were but a harbinger of things to come. Ecology was a foreign word then, so the fisherman was left to fight his own battles.

Likewise, the hunter became aware of the important relationship between wildlife and environment long before the average American joined the crusade against environmental destruction. He noticed that wild game became scarce or disappeared entirely whenever suitable habitat was destroyed to make way for civilization.

The hunter and fisherman were not helpless in combating the menace, however. Through license fees and voluntary excise taxes on firearms and ammunition and rods and reels, they financed programs for habitat improvement, wildlife research and land acquisition. Their concern in this direction — and the $5 billion in funds for wildlife that it produced — has saved many wildlife species from extinction and has restored others to near record populations.

Ironically, the hunter and fisherman are now viewed by many neophyte environmentalists as a threat to

Private ponds to be fish stocked

Private pond owners in Ohio who have entered into an agreement with the Division of Wildlife of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources to permit limited public fishing on their property received over 76,000 fish for stocking last week as part of the "FishOhio" Program.

Dale Haney, Chief of the Wildlife Division, said 85 pond owners received 13,080 largemouth bass, 13,055 channel catfish and 60,760 bluegills. "Providing free fish to qualified pond owners offers more recreational opportunity for Ohioans and is becoming an increasingly popular program throughout the state," Haney said, noting there are 47,000 farm ponds in Ohio.

"The winter fish kill in many shallow ponds was heavy this year because of the severe weather," Haney said. "This program will help rehabilitate those ponds."

Jaycees name co-chairmen

Halloween parade scheduled Oct. 29

The Washington C.H. Jaycee chapter has announced the appointment of Randy Roush and Tony Pack as co-chairmen for the annual Halloween parade and costume contest.

The parade will be held Saturday, Oct. 29 and will form on the Temple Street side of the Washington C.H. Middle School. The parade will step off at 11 a.m. and travel south on North Street to Court Street through the central business district to Main Street and then south to Gardner Park Stadium where the procession will disband. The costume judging contest will begin at the stadium immediately following the parade.

The Jaycees are actively supporting the Pony League football program by supplying a chain gang and a clock operator each Saturday night. The chairman is David DaRif.

John Gault, chairman of the Offsides game concessions project, has announced the menu for the Oct. 1 event will consist of bratwursts, hot dogs, soft drinks, and other items.

Reports were presented by the internal and external vice presidents on several Jaycee programs and projects. Gary C. Stout, a Jeffersonville attorney, was a guest at the regular Jaycee meeting. Stout is the Republican candidate for Washington C.H. Municipal Court judge.

Ron Manuel, an employee of the Ohio Department of Transportation, and Martin Jones, assistant director of the Washington C.H. Area Community Education program, were inducted as new members by Vernon Stanforth, chapter president. Manuel and Jones were the sixth and seventh new members inducted since the beginning of the fiscal year. Manuel was sponsored by Mike McCormick and Jones was sponsored by Dale Butler.

The Jaycees board of directors will meet at 8 p.m. Wednesday and the next regularly scheduled chapter meeting will be Oct. 5.

UNHURT-A small white poodle was luckier than its masters Thursday afternoon following a two-car collision at the intersection of U.S. 22 and Ohio 753. The dog partially camouflaged by weeds and tied to the wrecked automobile door was not injured in the mishap. One of its owners, Mrs. Minnie Decator of Hersey, Mich., is listed in poor condition in a Columbus hospital. Her husband, Frank E. Decator, was treated and released for minor injuries at Fayette County Memorial Hospital. In the meantime the dog was turned over to Reginald (Chink) Davis, the Fayette County dog warden, for safe keeping until the Decators are able to take care of the animal.

One woman remains in 'poor' condition

Three hurt in U.S. 22-Ohio 753 mishap

A 64-year-old Michigan woman remains in poor condition in University Hospital in Columbus Friday after suffering injuries in a two-car collision near the Washington C.H. city limits Thursday.

Mrs. Minnie E. Decator of Hersey, Mich., suffered multiple fractures in the mishap and was transferred to the Columbus hospital after receiving emergency treatment at Fayette County Memorial Hospital.

Two other persons were injured in the 11:20 a.m. mishap which occurred at the intersection of U.S. 22 and Ohio 753. Both Frank E. Decator, 65, and Wilma L. Fisher, 30, of Chillicothe were treated and released at Fayette County Memorial Hospital.

The Fayette County Sheriff's Department reported that Mrs. Decator was a passenger in an auto northbound on Ohio 753. The car reportedly drove through a stop sign into the path of the Fisher auto which was traveling west on U.S. 22.

The three injured persons were taken to the county hospital by the Fayette County Life Squad.

Ms. Fisher was reportedly treated for contusions, abrasions and a back sprain. Mr. Decator was treated for minor injuries.

Sheriff's deputies stated a citation is pending against Decator for failure to yield the right of way.

Another injury accident was reported

Friday morning when a local man reportedly drove off the left side of U.S. 62-SW.

According to a sheriff's report, Roger D. Mess, 20, 918 1/2 Maple St., was attempting to pass a vehicle when it pulled into his lane to pass a third car.

The Mess auto reportedly went off the left side of the road 150 feet, skidded back onto the roadway for 120 feet and then left the road again striking a fence post and a mailbox owned by Robert Everhart, 7761 U.S. 62-SW.

Mess did not require treatment at the scene of the accident.

Several minor traffic mishaps were reported Thursday by the Washington C.H. Police Department.

At 5:24 p.m., vehicles driven by Jerold A. Swank, 73, of 657 Willabar Drive, and Glenn W. Roberts, 36, of Leesburg, collided on W. Elm Street near the Highland Avenue intersection.

The Swank auto was reportedly turning into the Sagar Dairy store when the collision occurred.

At 4:50 p.m. Thursday, cars driven by James L. Ellis, 45, Park Forest, Ill., and Debra S. Walker, 18, Wilmington, collided at the intersection of Clinton and Oakland avenues.

The Ellis auto was reportedly making a left turn at the time of the collision.

At 11:08 a.m., vehicles driven by Nelson L. Bochard, 62, New Holland, and Albert T. Sockman, 69, of 3131 Ford Road collided in the 200 block of N. Hinde St.

The Bochard vehicle was reportedly entering a parking space and the Sockman auto was traveling south at the time of the mishap.

Interview included in report

Supper club crowd concerned Davidson

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Singer John Davidson has said he was worried about the size of the crowd and lack of exits at the Beverly Hills Supper Club, where fire broke out as he was preparing to perform May 28. The blaze killed 164 people.

The Southgate, Ky., nightclub's Cabaret Room — where most of the dead were found — "was jammed in as tight as any showroom I know," Davidson told Kentucky State Police investigating the fire.

Their interview with Davidson was included in about 15,000 pages of documents gathered by the fire investigation team.

A copy was obtained by the Louisville Courier-Journal from the U.S. House subcommittee on consumer protection and finance in Washington, the Courier said in a copyrighted story today.

Davidson told police in the interview June 11 at his California home that he had been concerned because his dressing room had no exit. "It seemed to me there should always be an exit backstage," he said.

He was also concerned, he said, that the Cabaret Room, where he was to perform, "was overcrowded ... the setup of the room is that the people are jammed in as tight as any showroom I know."

Only one word can describe golf pro

By MIKE FLYNN
Record-Herald Editor

Devoted. That's the only adjective that adequately describes Tony J. Capuana.

Capuana has devoted his life to the sport. It's been his chief interest since boyhood. He calls golf his "first love."

The love affair with the game spans more than five decades, the last 40 years in Washington C.H. as the golf pro at the Washington Country Club.

Since being named the local golf pro in May 1937, Capuana has been instrumental in popularizing the sport here.

He has introduced the sport to hundreds, while lending his knowledge on the game to countless others, many times just for the asking.

"Anytime I can get a golf club in anybody's hand, I'm happy," said the 62-year-old Capuana.

"My object is to try to get as many people as I can interested in golf. Sometimes, I give free lessons just to get them to play," the soft-spoken Capuana stated.

"Over 60 per cent of the lessons I give are free — just solving a minor problem a person is having with his game."

Nevertheless, promotion is the key to Capuana's philosophy about his occupation.

"Promotion of golf. That's the backbone of a (country) club. You always have people just taking up the game and you've always got to keep them interested," he explained.

Capuana has given literally thousands of lessons during his career. "I gave five today," said the veteran pro as he prepared a golf cart for a club member.

Although it's not one of his favorite topics, the modest Capuana admitted some of his instructions have spanned three generations — fathers, sons, and grandsons. "I guess you don't realize how time flies," he pointed out.

Perhaps the greatest satisfaction that can be attained by a golf pro is watching one of his pupils reach prominence.

As an example, this happened with Capuana when Phil Alkire won the club championship as a high school student in the early 1960s and captured several junior division titles before receiving a golf scholarship at Ohio State University.

To illustrate Capuana's presence on the local golf scene, just take a look at the following he has attracted over the years.

Besides the many local students, Capuana tutors golfers from the surrounding communities of Greenfield, Circleville, Chillicothe, Wilmington, Hillsboro and Leesburg, and even from as far away as Wooster and Columbus.

"Golf wasn't much when I came here," he said, "so I booked lessons once a week at Circleville, London, Lancaster and Snow Hill because they didn't have pros at that time."

He still serves as an advisor and provides instruction for the Washington Senior High School golf team. At one time he tutored high school golf teams from Washington C.H., Miami Trace, and Leesburg.

"Most of the kids I help now it's just with the fundamentals," the Columbus native noted.

The job of golf pro is a demanding one. Residing at 176 Magnolia Place, less than a half mile south of the country club, makes it convenient for Capuana because of the often endless hours he spends working at the course.

In addition to his duties as an instructor, Capuana coordinates the club's dozens of tournaments and leagues each year. Twenty-seven tournaments were held this season and he also supervised the weekly ladies day outing and the weekly men's and women's golf leagues. He also has formed two special tournaments for women from three nearby cities.

"It used to be that the golf season ran from Memorial Day to Labor Day. But that's not true now. This place was packed Saturday with all the football games going on," he reported.

Free classes for junior golfers are conducted on Tuesdays and Thursdays for children of club members in a program initiated by Capuana "15 or 20 years ago."

"They (the classes) have started a lot of kids playing golf," said Capuana who has a staff of three part-time assistants.

Capuana also works closely with course superintendent Carl Self and his five-member staff in the seemingly never-ending groundskeeping chores.

"A golf pro oversees the whole operation of the club and works closely with the board," he explained.

Before his wife, Arvella, became ill about five years ago, Capuana also found time for several other related activities. He formerly authored a periodic golf column for the Record-Herald, and hosted local radio television shows, giving golf tips to listeners and viewers.

During his tenure at the 54-year-old Washington Country Club, Capuana has witnessed and initiated a number of improvements.

"When I came here dues were only $25 a year, and the pro shop was in a 10 by 15 foot building. It's expanded 10 times since then."

The club membership has increased from just more than 100 in 1937 to 340 in 1977. The total presently includes 298 registered golfers.

The condition of the Washington Country Club grounds was one of Capuana's prime concerns when he accepted the position here.

"When I first came to the course, we had to call a farmer to make hay because the roughs were so overgrown. The greens were small and full of crabgrass. They were really in bad shape," he remembered.

With the advice of a professional groundskeeper from Columbus, the 80.7 acre tract of land containing the nine-hole course was improved. Since taking the job, some 800 trees have been planted and several greens remodeled. "We just kept making head way, improving it (the course) every year," he said.

The unselfish Class A PGA pro has shared what he has learned over the years at neighboring courses, assisting in the design of the Hillsboro Elks golf course and the J&R course at Wilmington.

Capuana, a frequent instructor at various golf clinics, formerly headed several of the standing club committees.

He served on the board of directors for about 15 years before 1960 when the original corporation was dissolved and a new one was formed.

He now serves as the board's secretary-treasurer. The changes Capuana has witnessed over the years have been numerous. Some have been dramatic.

"I never dreamed that when I first became a golf pro that I'd be changing oil every 5,000 miles and changing tires on electric carts," he joked. "You just about got to be able to do everything now."

New tennis courts were constructed at the country club two years ago and Capuana supervises their operation along with the committee chairmen.

His dedication to the game of golf started at an early age.

As a youth he resided about a half mile from the Scioto Country Club with his family of two brothers ("both are good golfers") and five sisters.

While attending high school, he worked as a caddy and other odd jobs at the nearby golf course. He progressed through all phases of the club operation, from the clubhouse to the pro shop.

Back in those days, he said, the golf club shafts were made in the pro shop exclusively from hickory as the steel shaft was not introduced until the early 1930s.

"They said they (steel shafts) would never work," he recalled. "But over the years they were perfected."

While at the Scioto Country Club, Capuana worked under the guidance of three pros, the first being the late George Sargent, whom he called "the father of the Professional Golfers Association."

Sargent, who won the U.S. Open in 1907, was a close friend of golfing great Bobby Jones and left Columbus in 1931 to join Jones in the operation of a course in Atlanta, Ga., he said.

Following graduation from high school in 1935, Capuana served as an assistant golf pro at the Scioto Country Club for three years.

His last boss, Joe Thomas, helped him land the Washington C.H. job.

"I was just looking for a job as a pro. I had been to Lancaster and Circleville before hearing about the job here."

He was hired by a Hilton Nolan, an insurance agent, who headed the local club's greens committee.

An avid sportsman, Capuana is a proprietor of Bowland Lanes. He helped found the bowling alley in 1948 and was instrumental in a major expansion project in 1960. "I'm still active there and also give bowling lessons," he said.

While in high school he captained the school's state championship golf team during his senior year and was a member of the school's three-time city and district championship teams.

He also played football, basketball and baseball. "In those days you could do it all," he said.

The Southern Ohio PGA member is an accomplished golfer, and still plays "a little but not much." His best 18-hole round was a 66 and he once fired a 30 for nine holes.

He once had a perfect 300 game in bowling (in 1954) and shot a hole-in-one in the early 1940s. "Can you beat that?" he asked.

Despite a lengthy and colorful career, Capuana said he has no plans for retirement.

"I'll be here as long as I can do a good job and the people appreciate my work," he noted.

Obviously his work is appreciated. The appreciation will be extended Sunday night when Capuana will be honored by Washington Country Club members at a special banquet marking his 40 years as the local pro.

New trial scheduled

'Hung' jury reported in drunk driving trial

After nearly two hours of deliberation, a Washington C.H. Municipal Court jury was unable to reach a verdict Wednesday night in the trial of a local man charged with driving while intoxicated.

They had been hearing the trial of Ronald L. Farmer, 35, of 411 Weddings St., which began at 8:30 Wednesday morning. Seven witnesses had appeared and testified for the prosecution and defense, according to Judge John P. Case.

Farmer had been charged for driving while intoxicated by Ohio Highway Patrol officers on May 8.

Judge Case said the jury members were in deliberation for about an hour and 10 minutes when they called for the bailiff. The jury foreman told Judge Case they were unable to agree on a verdict.

The judge requested they go back and try again after telling them he had observed their conduct during the course of the trial and they appeared to be attentive and capable. Another half hour passed and at about 7 p.m. the jury returned, again saying they could not agree on a verdict.

The Municipal Court judge then discharged the "hung" jury and set a new trial for Nov. 30.

Dawson was taken by private car to Fayette County Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released, according to a sheriff's department report.

Ford at ease with football players

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Gerald R. Ford is not prone to take his achievements too seriously, the University of Nebraska's Cornhusker football team has learned.

Coach Tom Osborne said that when Ford visited with the team Thursday, his players seemed more interested in the fact that Ford was a former Michigan football center than in the fact that he was once president of the United States.

"Well, I'm a has-been in both areas," Ford quipped.

The former president said he was more at ease with the football players than he had been earlier in the day when he lectured to several classes at the university.

Viet woman regains custody of son

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Two years after she fled her native Vietnam, Le Thi Sang has regained custody of her son from an American couple who fled the country with the boy shortly before the Communists took over the country.

Mrs. Le packed her 8-year-old son, Tuan, on a bus back to Ohio Thursday after a judge ruled against William and Elizabeth Knight, who had cared for the boy for two years.

"I love him and I feel that he likes and loves me," Mrs. Le testified during the custody hearing.

"It must be emphasized that we cannot under the law place the child with the Knights just because their home is better than Le Sang's," wrote San Joaquin Superior Court Judge Bill Dozier.

The judge said Mrs. Le is "a far cry from an unfit person" and had "devoted a life entirely to reclaiming" her son for the past 23 months. He noted that the boy has now said he wants to return to his mother.

Mrs. Le, a former waitress at an American military base in Saigon, gave the boy to the Knights in April 1975 as the Communists shelled government positions only miles away.

She had her son, whose American name is Dean, declared an orphan to smooth the way for his adoption by the Knights. But in the confusion of the final days of the war, the adoption was never completed.

When the court fight over Tuan's custody erupted last year, Tuan refused to speak Vietnamese or talk to his mother, according to her lawyer, Bill Kennedy.

"He kept saying, 'My ears cannot hear Vietnamese. It's a stupid language.' He tried to completely blot out his Vietnamese identity," Kennedy said.

Mrs. Le left her job as a maid in a motel near Toledo, Ohio to attend the court hearings.

William Knight, a former helicopter maintenance instructor in Vietnam, told the court at the time, "He's proud being an American boy." In an interview last February, Knight said, "I love that boy and he has never said one word about wanting to leave. If he had, he could leave."

But, in the course of a summer visit ordered by Dozier, Tuan began to eat Vietnamese food and talk to his mother and an aunt in Ohio, said Dozier.

"Through some magic elixir of patience, resilience and mother love, plus an inner need in the 8-year-old boy, the mother won the battle," the judge wrote.

Rain expected in Ohio tonight

By The Associated Press

Here is the agriculture weather advisory for Ohio provided by the National Weather Service:

Showers will move into the state again tonight and are likely across the state Saturday. A cold front is moving out of the Plains and should complete its push across Ohio by midday Sunday.

FIELD OPERATIONS — Field delays continue to plague Ohio agriculture interests. Some northern sections are still too wet to work, and additional rain this weekend will lengthen delays. Central and southern sections of the state should get another complete day in the fields.

HARVEST — Mature corn and soybeans in central and southern sections of the state will drydown at moderate rates today. Crops at harvest level moisture should be hurried in. Many corn fields suffered stalk damage due to insects or disease

"The psychologists for both sides said he was acting too much like an American — watching TV all the time, playing baseball and shooting pinball," Kennedy said. "They said he would be devastated when he finally confronted the fact that he was obviously Asian."

"Tuan is a street-smart little kid. He's something of an opportunist in his ability to adapt to any situation," said Dozier. "I think he'll be able to adapt to his mother."

The judge said the boy's father, Thomas Lavigne, married the mother in a Vietnamese ceremony when he was an American soldier in Vietnam.

Peter Simonelli, an attorney for the Knights, said he would recommend against an appeal.

earlier in the season, and weakened stalks are most prone to wind or weather damage. Harvest now could prevent losses. Extension specialists at Ohio State are also recommending harvest as quickly as possible for mature soybeans. The extremely wet weather has been excellent for the activation and spread of seed rot organisms. Delayed harvest could cause poor quality seed and reduced yields.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLE HARVEST — Harvest delays are again expected for fruits and vegetables. Potato harvest has suffered due to wet fields, and additional delays are likely. Tomato fields are still soft and more rains could again keep mechanical harvesters out of the fields.

HAYING — Hay on the ground should be hurried in. New cuts will suffer through periods of wetting.

McClain looks for first place

Crystal ball sees Lions, Panthers winners

By MARK REA
Record-Herald Sports Editor

Two weeks are gone of the South Central Ohio football season and Miami Trace and Greenfield McClain are still on top of the SCOL with identical 1-0 records. On the bottom of the list is newcomer Teays Valley, 0-2 after being beaten in successive weeks by the Panthers and Tigers.

This week, the Vikings won't have to worry about going 0-3 in the league ... they finally get some non-league competition. However, Greenfield can go into first place by themselves with a win over Madison Plains.

After two weeks, the Panthers and Tigers are still on top in offense and defense, respectively. Trace has already rolled up over 1000 total yards and 142 points while McClain has given up only six points to opponents and just 255 total yards.

This week, seven more games dot the SCOL schedule one week before the teams plunge headlong into league competition. In addition to the Greenfield at Madison Plains game, Washington C.H. entertains Lexington, Miami Trace plays host to Jackson, Wilmington plays at home with Dayton Carroll, Athens travels to Circleville, Hillsboro is at home versus Zane Trace and Teays Valley entertains Franklin Heights.

Last week's predictions were 3-2-2, bringing the yearly average to 7-5-2 for 57 percent.

JACKSON AT MIAMI TRACE

Adjectives are rapidly running out for the Panthers with seven weeks yet to go. Jackson should give the Panthers a little more of a challenge than Delaware Hayes and Teays Valley have thus far.

The Panthers rolled up 510 yards and 84 points against the Pacers and then came back last week for 563 more yards and 58 more points. The only place they can go is down, right? Don't you believe it.

With guys named Cobb and Hennessy hitting you and that guy named Schlichter throwing to his buddy named Hanners, the Panthers will end this series with a big bang. . . Miami Trace 49, Jackson 6.

LEXINGTON AT WASHINGTON C.H.

Two weeks ago, we predicted the Lions to beat Wellston. They lost, 22-21. Last week, we predicted the Lions to lose to Chillicothe. They won, 28-18. This week, the third time is the charm.

Court House has plugged all its offensive holes and throws one of the more powerful running games in the league at opponents with tailback Larry Bricksles and wingback Terry Wilson. And, the defense is coming along after giving up 40 points in two games.

With Lexington's porous defense and an offense that hasn't scored a point this season, how can we go wrong? . . . Washington C.H. 24, Lexington 6.

McCLAIN AT MADISON PLAINS

This is one of those games at a powerful defense meets a weak offense. Greenfield scored a moral victory last week, tying Springfield Shawnee at Springfield. Although coach Fred Brisker must have been pleased with the defensive effort, he wasn't particularly thrilled with the offense.

Quarterback Steve Wood must be having nightmares after his first two weeks at the helm of the Tigers. He has thrown 23 passes on the season and hasn't completed any. Leading rusher Randy Seldon was held to around 70 yards last week.

But, don't worry McClain fans. Plains is having another one of those years. West Jefferson extended their losing streak to 12 in a row last week with a 53-0 pounding. Look for Wood to get on the track and Seldon to get back on it. . . McClain 38, Madison Plains 0.

ATHENS AT CIRCLEVILLE

Circleville is down in the dumps. Used to having a potent offense and a good defense, the Tigers have only one this season.

In two games, the Tigers have been shut out once and scored just six points in the other for an 0-2 record. But, the defense stands tall, having given up only 19 points this year.

Athens seems to have about the same personnel from last year, although they graduated 15 seniors from the team. The Bulldogs, 1-1 this season, are coming off a win last week.

Although it seems logical to pick Athens, Larry Cook and the Tigers don't like being 0-2, much less the prospects of being 0-3. So, here's your first Upset Special of the year. . . Circleville 13, Athens 7.

DAYTON CARROLL AT WILMINGTON

What looked to be a pretty good season for Wilmington is falling very flat very quickly. Xenia took the Hurricane to the cleaners the first week, and the offense sputtered and died last week. Only the defense salvaged a 0-0 tie.

And, this week, things don't look to be improving. Dayton Carroll has won both of its meetings this season and has put around 30 points on the board each time. They will give the Wilmington defense a good test.

Gary Williams missed all of last week's game with a leg injury while quarterback Rick Earley is very doubtful for the game with a knee problem. Those two injuries add up to disaster for the Hurricane. . . Dayton Carroll 28, Wilmington 7.

ZANE TRACE AT HILLSBORO

Hillsboro is in the same boat with Washington C.H. Two weeks ago, we predicted them to win. They lost. Last week, we predicted them to lose. They won. The third time is the charm.

Hillsboro is not one of the strongest teams around, but, then again, neither is Zane Trace. The Indians won last year's meeting, 7-0 and won last week on two fourth quarter scores.

The Indian defense is the surprise of the season so far. They rank third in the SCOL, having given up only a total of 271 yards this season. With that kind of defense, Hillsboro is going to be a surprise to a lot of teams this season, beginning with Zane Trace. . . Hillsboro 20, Zane Trace 6.

FRANKLIN HEIGHTS AT TEAYS VALLEY

Neither of these teams have enjoyed any kind of success this season ... they're both 0-2. But, the Vikings haven't even scored a single point yet. But, of course, against teams like Greenfield and Miami Trace, you don't expect to score much.

Despite being 0-2, Franklin Heights, plays in a league with a lot of rough and tumble teams and looks upon Teays Valley as a bit of a breather.

It doesn't look very good for Teays Valley once again. . . Franklin Heights 24, Teays Valley 7.

TWO-FISTED WINNER -- Debbie Wheat of Washington C.H. doubles her fists for a return last night against Miami Trace. The Lions dealt the Panthers a loss with a 1-15, 15-1, 15-5 decision. Trace salvaged the reserve match, 15-0, 15-6.

Blyleven no-hits California, 6-0

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

There was that awful moment when the Texas Rangers trainer walked to the mound in the eighth inning to talk to Bert Blyleven.

"I didn't know if I could throw, but even if I was going to throw underhand I wasn't going to leave," Blyleven said afterwards.

The curve-balling right-hander stayed in the game and hurled the third no-hitter of the major league season as the Rangers blanked the California Angels 6-0.

The no-hitter sparked a light American League schedule that saw the Baltimore Orioles tighten up the East Division title race while the Boston Red Sox slipped a little off the pace.

"It was like the world stopped when (Thad) Bosley swung at that last pitch," ending the game, Blyleven said.

Bosley, who entered the game batting .308 struck out in the first, seventh and ninth innings. Before his final out whiff, Blyleven issued his only walk of the night to pinch-hitter Carlos May.

Only one other Angel batter reached base. Ron Jackson was safe on Bert Campaneris' error to lead off the third, but was wiped out in an inning double play.

"I used the curve ball exclusively in the ninth inning," Blyleven said. "I threw about 60 per cent curve balls tonight. My leg doesn't bother me that much when I throw curves."

It was the first start in 16 days for the native of Zeist, Holland, who went to high school just five miles from the Angels' stadium in Anaheim, Calif. Blyleven has been bothered by a groin pull on his right side.

He reinjured the muscle pull while pitching to Mario Guerrero in the eighth, bringing out the Ranger trainer.

"I first realized about the no-hitter in the second inning when I looked at the scoreboard and saw that (loser Paul) Hartzell and I both had one going and I thought it sure would be nice. In the third and fourth, I concentrated more and the next thing I knew it was the eighth inning."

In other AL games, Detroit edged Boston 5-4, Baltimore trounced Toronto 7-1 and Chicago nipped Seattle 5-4.

Blyleven lives in nearby Mission Viejo, Calif., and his parents, in-laws, wife, son and daughter were among the 8,031 fans cheering him on.

"I love Southern California," he said. "That's my home. I'm glad I could pitch the no-hitter in front of everyone I love."

Texas scored all the runs Blyleven needed in the third inning with the aid of an error by Hartzell, 8-11. Jim Sundberg doubled and scored on Mike Hargrove's single. Hartzell then muffed Campaneris' sacrifice bunt and Toby Harrah later singled home two runs.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 1
A three-run homer by Lee May backed Mike Flanagan's six-hitter as Baltimore crushed Toronto to keep alive their AL East title hopes and move to just 1 1/2 games behind the New York Yankees.

"The half game doesn't mean anything," Baltimore manager Earl Weaver said, "because the Yanks can still play and win it."

San Diego beats Reds, 3-1

Philadelphia's big lead shrinks to 6 1/2

AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "In my mind the Phillies have it clinched," said Bruce Sutter.

Sutter may believe the Phillies have the National League East division clinched with a 6 1/2-game lead over second place Pittsburgh with 10 games to play. But he isn't about to help them clinch it.

Sutter came on in the eighth and gave up just one hit in chalking up his 30th save of the season in Chicago's 5-3 victory over the Phillies Thursday night. The victory went to reliever Paul Reuschel, who worked one inning in support of starter Dennis Lamp.

The Phillies appeared to agree with Sutter. They weren't concerned with losing two straight at home to the Cubs and walking a treadmill with that magic number of four, any combination of four Phillies' wins or Pirates' losses.

Phillies' manager Danny Ozark said his club is playing good ball and needs to get a few more runs on the scoreboard. He looked like a guy counting his winnings.

Just a word of caution, however, not panic. The Phillies of 1964 were 6 1/2 games ahead with 10 games to play. And do you remember what happened?

To refresh your memory they lost 10 straight and finished second.

In other National League action San Diego edged Cincinnati 3-1, Atlanta whipped Houston 8-4 and Montreal blanked St. Louis 2-1.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the fourth off Lamp on consecutive singles by Greg Luzinski, Jay Johnstone and Garry Maddox.

But Chicago went ahead 2-1 in the fifth. Bobby Murcer singled and Steve Ontiveros walked. Phils starter Jim Lonborg got the next two batters, intentionally walked Mick Kelleher to load the bases, then gave up that two-run single to Lamp.

In the bottom of the fifth, Larry Bowa singled with two out and Mike Schmidt tripled. The Cubs took a 3-2 lead on Ontiveros' single in the sixth. However, the Phillies tied it on singles by Luzinski and Johnstone and Bob Boone's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the inning.

Lonborg gave up the winning run in the seventh, walking Kelleher to start the inning. Reuschel sacrificed Kelleher to second and Biittner sacrificed in the winning run.

Padres 3, Reds 1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Rookie Gene Richards says he doesn't feel better about the kind of season the San Diego Padres are enduring, even though he tied a modern-day record for stolen bases.

"Personal records don't mean much," said the Padres' speedster after his team's 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Thursday in the final game between the teams this year.

"I'm really disappointed with this season," added Richards. "It's the first time I've ever been with a team that's a natural born loser. The only consistency we've had has all been to the negative."

Whatever, Richards has caught plenty of attention and respect in what otherwise has been a season of turmoil for the prize rookie and his teammates.

While the Padres were winning for only the third time in their last 13 outings, Richards tied the modern-day rookie stolen base record in the third inning, set in 1910 by Reola Zeider of the Chicago White Sox and equaled in 1966 by Sonny Jackson of the Houston Astros.

"I liked Richards the first time I saw him," said Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson.

"He's playing in the wrong ballpark. He should be in St. Louis. The way he hits the ball, he would hit .320 on that hard Astro turf easy."

As it is, Richards is hitting .282, ranks second on the Padres in runs scored with 76 and appears a cinch to break the rookie stolen base record with eight games remaining.

The combination of all those things has made him a prime candidate for National League rookie of the year honors.

"The best way to handle Richards," said Reds' pitcher Fred Norman, "is don't give him any hits and don't walk him."

In other words, keep him off the bases."

Cincinnati managed that pretty well Thursday but the Padres still wound up salvaging the finale of their three-game series with the Reds.

Rookie Bill Almon and first baseman Gene Tenace both collected two hits to lead the Padres while George Foster led the Reds with four hits and Dave Concepcion rapped his eighth homer in a losing cause.

Southpaw Bob Shirley worked the first six innings to pick up the win and improve his record to 10-18 while Reds' starter Doug Capilla absorbed the loss to fell to 7-8.

Expos 2, Cardinals 0
Rookie left-hander Dan Schatzeder limited St. Louis to six hits and drove in the seventh inning with a two-out single in the winning inning as Montreal blanked St. Louis.

Braves 8, Astros 4
Brian Aseltine drove in three runs with a double and a single as Atlanta whipped Houston and snapped Cesar Cedeno's 22-game hitting streak.

Eddie Solomon, 6-6, hurled the first 61-3 innings for the Braves to pick up the victory.

Sets five world records

Governor Skipper takes Jug: will retire at Fair Chance

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP) — Governor Skipper, winner of yesterday's Little Brown Jug, will make his new home in Washington C.H. The record-breaking three-year old will be retired to stud at the Fair Chance Farms, according Dr. D.R. Junk, manager of the farm.

The winning colt had a two-inch wood splinter removed from his gum just hours before he smashed five world records and eight Jug marks in winning the middle jewel of 3-year-old pacing's Triple Crown.

"We had a little problem this morning," conceded his driver, John Chapman. "But, being the horse that he is, he overcame it."

The Meadow Skipper colt, owned by Bill Wirtz of ice hockey's Chicago Black Hawks, now stands in the forefront of what may be the greatest crop of 3-year-old pacers in history.

He's won eight of his last nine heats against the best. Only a break in the Geers Stake at Detroit last week spoiled that string.

His $75,700 payday here sent his 1977 earnings past $342,000, No. 1 among his age and gait.

Even in the glow of victory, Chapman was worried about his horse's health. Swelling had accompanied the splinter Governor Skipper apparently picked up in his stall at the Delaware County Fairgrounds.

"I want to see how he comes out tomorrow," said Chapman, winning his first Jug in four attempts.

"I'm concerned about his mouth. That will determine our future."

Two things are certain. Governor Skipper foiled Jade Prince's bid for a Triple Crown and, if he's healthy, will be an overwhelming choice to win the Crown's third leg, The Messenger, Nov. 12 at Roosevelt Raceway.

Jade Prince, winner of the first leg, the Cane Pace, was a badly beaten ninth and 10th behind Governor Skipper's blistering miles of 1:56 1-5 and 1:56 2-5.

Governor Skipper, seventh behind Jade Prince in the Cane, was a different horse this time. He led all eight quarters of the two races.

His opening trip accounted for two world and three Jug records. The second heat performance earned him one more world mark and two more Jug standards.

And his combined heat times of 3:52 3-5 broke two world records and four Jug marks before 39,949, a paid attendance high for the classic's 32 years.

"I had only been in three other Jugs," said the 48-year-old Chapman. "This is by far my best horse. I have one heckuva horse to beat."

Washington C.H. was well represented at yesterday's races. In the fifth race, Willzer J.W., Herobe Streaker and Volunteer Captain all raced. Willzer J.W. is owned by Willard Bitzer, Herobe Streaker is owned by Robert Helfrich and Volunteer Captain is owned by Carl Smith.

Willzer J.W. won the race in a time of 2:00.4 and paid $16.80, $5 and $3.40. Herobe Streaker placed third and paid $3 while Volunteer Captain finished fifth.

In the second heat, Willzer J.W. finished second behind Heritage Time's 1:59.0. Willzer paid $3.20 and $2.60 to place. Herobe Streaker was fifth and Volunteer Captain did not race.

Also racing yesterday were Jeri M.C. in the first race, owned by Ernest and Dorothy McAllister and Certainly Right in the second race, owned by Ansel W. Kirk, Jr. of New Holland.

Bargaining measure snagged

Alcoholism treatment bill okayed by solons

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — State lawmakers closed out the first week of an abbreviated autumn session with unanimous agreement on a bill requiring insurance coverage for treatment of alcoholism. But there was sharp partisan dissent on a second measure to strip some state employees of Civil Service protection.

In committee, the opening round of a House-Senate conference to find a compromise on legislation establishing collective bargaining rights for 500,000 public employees produced little movement.

A second joint committee meeting was set for Tuesday, though majority Democratic leaders now doubt that agreement can be reached before adjournment later next week. That means final action on the Democrats' top priority, the bargaining bill, would be put off until mid-October at the earliest.

The alcoholism bill drew 33-0 Senate backing after an emotional speech by sponsor Jerome Stano, D-24 Parma, who described the problem as the "third most common disease in this country."

His bill, sent on to the House, requires commercial group insurance policies to provide coverage for in-patient, out-patient and residential care of alcoholism.

It requires group health care providers, that offer coverage for mental or emotional disorders, to include at least minimum out-patient benefits for such disorders.

"The misery of mental illness and alcoholism is just as tormenting, painful, destructive, costly and treatable as any physical illness and should be recognized as such in insurance policies," Stano said.

"The professionals in the field tell us that out-patient treatment is far more effective," the Cuyahoga County lawmaker added. "The insurance companies have not adjusted to this more humane, less costly approach."

Sen. Robert E. O'Shaughnessy, D-15 Columbus, had a more difficult time selling a House-approved bill that would take Civil Service status away from examiners and their supervisors in the office of State Auditor Thomas E. Ferguson, a Democrat.

"This bill is not for the purpose of firing people, it is a bill to permit the hiring of the best personnel that can be had," O'Shaughnessy argued.

No one currently classified in the auditor's office would be affected by the legislation, he said, but about 150 probationary employees would be vulnerable.

About 700 positions — examiners, higher ranking "state examiners" and supervisors for both categories — would eventually be declassified, a spokesman for Ferguson said. Examiners carry out audits of state agencies and local government units.

VOLUNTEER DEDICATION — Mary K. West, director of nursing at Fayette County Memorial Hospital, presents Dr. Robert A. Heiny with a plaque proclaiming his membership in the Central Ohio Chapter of the American Heart Association's Presidents' Club. Heiny has served the chapter as president for 18 years. His dedication as a volunteer for the heart association was honored at the chapter's board of directors meeting Thursday. Miss West was appointed the new president.

Heart association honors Dr. Heiny

The Central Ohio Chapter of the American Heart Association has named Dr. Robert A. Heiny, 716 Park Drive, to the national organization's Presidents' Club.

Dr. Heiny was presented a plaque pronouncing the nomination at the local chapter's board of directors meeting Thursday at Fayette County Memorial Hospital. Only those association members who have served as president of a chapter for at least two years are eligible for the Presidents' Club. Dr. Heiny has served as the local chapter's president for the past 18 years.

As Dr. Heiny steps down from the post, the Central Ohio heart association chapter has appointed Mary K. West, director of nursing at Fayette Memorial, as the group's new president.

Miss West presented Dr. Heiny with the plaque calling him "a very good man."

Other new officers named at the board meeting Thursday were Marlene Rankin, secretary; Bruce Ream, treasurer; Jackie Loudner, publicity chairman; and Dr. James McCracken, campaign chairman. Dr. Heiny was appointed as medical advisor for the group.

Radioactive levels normal after test
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency reported Thursday that air samples taken around Ohio showed radioactive levels remained normal while a cloud of nuclear debris from a Chinese bomb test passed over the state.

This and a lack of rainfall across the state minimized the threat of radioactive contamination of pastures or forage crops.

The Ohio Agriculture Department advised dairymen that cows no longer had to be kept from pastures in areas where no rainfall was expected before Saturday morning.

An attorney for Miss Sale entered the plea in Southampton Justice Court on Thursday. She is due to appear there again next Thursday for sentencing.
